

Life insurance isn't for the people who die. It's for the people who live.

Jim and Judy were high-school sweethearts, and while a tour of duty overseas separated them, it couldn't keep them apart. Thirty years later, they reconnected and married.

Life, however, intervened again. Judy learned her breast cancer had returned and spread to her bones, which was terminal. However, her life insurance included an accelerated death benefit rider, which allowed Judy to access 90% of her policy's death benefit while she and Jim still had time together.

This gave the couple incredible peace of mind, knowing their last days together would be free of financial worries. Judy was also grateful that her husband would be well cared for financially after her death.

Learn more at www.lifehappens.org/emptynest

Bruce Gleason
802-44-TAXES
bruce@GleasonTaxAdvisory.com

This piece has been reproduced with the permission of Life Happens, a nonprofit organization dedicated to helping consumers make smart insurance decisions to safeguard their families' financial futures. Life Happens does not endorse any insurance company, product or advisor.
© Life Happens 2015. All rights reserved.